

How to Play Integer War

Shuffle the cards and deal the deck evenly to each player facedown. Each player flips over the top card and figures out the value of their card. The player with the highest number wins and collects all of the face up cards. You can either place the winning cards on the bottom of your deck to keep playing continuously, or place the cards to the side and the player with the largest winning pile at the end wins.

If a player gives a wrong answer, another player can try to answer it. If that other player answers correctly, they get the card and will either place it at the bottom of their deck or place it in their winning pile.

If there is a tie, each player involved in the tie will flip another card. The winner of the second flip wins all the cards that are face up on the table.

The game works best with two players, but may be played with more.
